

ABSTRACT

A method for facilitating the transfer of an Event from a source object utilizing a first format to a target object utilizing a second format disparate from the first format, wherein the event associated with a Conversion Profile at the source object is received from the source object. The Event is converted based on the Conversion Profile into a mutated Event, and is then transferred to the target object.